

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275) - 2110

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

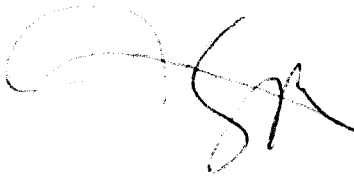

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

 J. Sickels, FRAJW
165760

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

Shannon

Didelon, Shannon

119322

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

VESICOT - WASH, Beijing
154145

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

[Handwritten signature]
[Handwritten signature]
[Handwritten signature]

25. Okt. 2006

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

133860

FRA SW

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

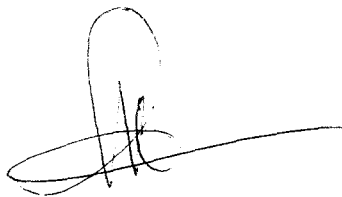

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

154242 FRASU

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

160512
TRASW

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

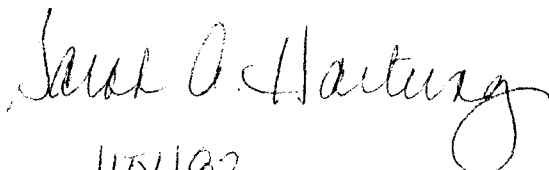

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

115482

FRASW

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

C. J. LONDON

UAL FRANKFURT FLIGHT
ATTENDANT

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

David S. Wolf

JAL 3/20/07 1:00 PM
4/12/2007

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

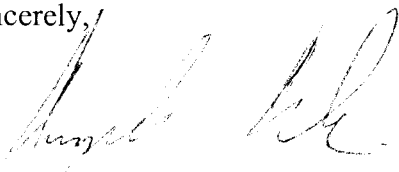

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be "David Lee", written over a horizontal line.

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

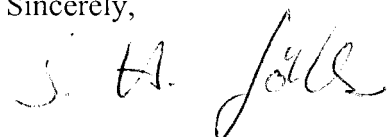

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

Silke H. Goeller

FRASW 105926

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

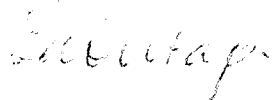

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Scott Taylor".

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "J. Smith", is written over a faint, circular official stamp. The stamp contains some illegible text and a central emblem.

The Honorable Mary Peters
Secretary
United States Department of Transportation
400 Seventh Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20590

RE: United Airlines Washington DC – Beijing Application (Docket OST-2006-25275)

Dear Secretary Peters:

I am an employee of United Airlines, and I am writing in support of United's application to start the first-ever Capital-to-Capital service between Washington DC and Beijing, China.

United's employees have worked extremely hard over the last few years to return the airline to a competitive state and to provide the flying public with high-quality service and flight options through our extensive domestic and international network. Our proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the next critical step in this journey. United has the longest-standing commitment to air service to China, dating back to the early 1980's, and we have proven that we will make the best use of the limited air rights available in this market.

United's proposal to fly non-stop from Washington DC to Beijing would provide a critical link between the capitals of two of the most important countries in the world. Right now Washington DC has air service to most of the major capitals of the world – except Beijing. Moreover, most of the major capitals of the world have air service to Beijing, except Washington DC. United's Capital-to-Capital service would provide a valuable service in advancing our nation's trade and foreign policy interests.

United's proposed service would not only be good for the country, it would also be beneficial to the Washington DC region – the nation's largest metropolitan area lacking non-stop service to China. The Washington DC region is the nation's fourth largest metropolitan area, and the Washington-Beijing market is three-times larger than the Dallas-Beijing market. The region has the fastest-growing job market in the country, and the region has the largest high-tech employment sector. Linking this large and increasingly important local economy with China will make the best use of the new route authority.

When you add up all these factors, United's proposed Capital-to-Capital service is the best choice for a new route authority to China. I respectfully urge you to award United the authority to open up the first-ever direct route between Washington DC and Beijing.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Joseph S. Galt".